Thoughts from the Former President of the European Commission on how the three Powers can establish a New World Order.

The China-US, China-Europe and US-Europe bilateral relationships have arguably been the three most important geopolitical and economic relationships in the world. Today, with enhanced and more global rapport, the three powers are finally engaging in a trilateral relationship, allowing them to potentially establish and manage a new world order - whether it be on the political, economic/trade or cultural front, especially in blending in a saavoir-faire in the management of conflicts of interest.

Mr. Romano Prodi, former President of the European Commission, will discuss some of the most pressing issues around these three leaders: Reasons for the trilateral relationship, what the trilateral relationship can and cannot achieve.

Kindly RSVP by Friday, September 10, to avoid disappointment
